What's Your Story?
Showcase Your Civil Justice Program's Accomplishments

Communicating a powerful story about the impact of your program's accomplishments to major audiences – including legislators, the judiciary, bar leaders, potential funders, and other stakeholders – is a crucial capacity that defines a great program.

The Resource can help you convey a strong message about results achieved for your many beneficiaries, at three different levels of detail including a program-wide overview report, a set of detailed reports that showcase individual projects, and data presentations that apply a range of measures and benchmarks to demonstrate your program's effectiveness.

We can help…

Design comprehensive data collection instruments that focus on results achieved.

Summarize and synthesize the information to tell a powerful story about your program and its impact upon the low-income community.

We can provide…

Forms Development – Targeted questions designed to capture results and accomplishments.

Information Processing – Effective tracking tools and a proven screening process that identifies errors and omissions and provides for follow-up with the people who supplied the data.

An Informational Database – A database that supports resource development, self-evaluation and creation of materials focused on success stories.

Project Summaries – Concise reports that present a results-focused snapshot of each project.

The Summary Overview – A comprehensive report that aggregates the information about individual projects to highlight a program's global impact.

Data Tables – The aggregate and individual views of compiled data that present a quantitative picture of project data at a glance.
